

Many of our regular readers have commented on our emphasis on the ministry and we happily confess to that but ministry is more effective the more Bible you know. This is a harvest field and the workers in this field need first to know how to pick fruit...but the expertise concerning planting, watering and getting the crops to market are very important. We are training these young people to minister in the full circle of the ministry preparing them to be pastors, pastor's wives and teachers. The first photo is of Jessa (one of our lady students) giving a report on jewellery in ancient and Biblical times. They must research the subject or person online and through books in our library. Jessa went to a great effort to display what she found and did a thorough study on the subject in books and online. Her presentation was informative and interesting. Jessa is a bit advanced in that she lacks only part of a semester for a four year college degree but most of our students lack knowledge of many basic subjects such as European history (which makes it difficult to teach church history) and world geography. Without these basic tools it makes teaching many other subjects a bit complicated...the teacher must fill in all the blanks before getting to the desired subject. When possible, my daughter Mary teaches these subjects and does a marvellous job doing it. As the verse above supports, our academics are geared toward furthering others in ministry and Bible knowledge. We recently graduated 8 students and have not yet replaced them so our class number is a bit low. Please pray the good Lord will send us more students. We do have a new lady student coming in this evening...Praise the Lord.

A NEW WING OF MINISTRY TAKES FLIGHT

Next week we will open a children's ACE school. We are excited to offer our church folk a quality education for their children and to offer it to the community around us at a very affordable price. As all of our ministries there is no profit involved we only hope to break even. This will also offer training opportunities for our institute students to function in the school and learn how it operates. Photo shows some of those involved.
